The Producer Writes...

Norman Robbins is perhaps best known for his pantomimes and comedies, but Prescription For Murder is a tense murder mystery.

The action takes place in the living room of the Forths' detached house in Bere Knighton, a small village in North Devon.

The tranquillity of the household is disturbed by the arrival of a mysterious stranger, who has unsettling news about the village doctor—is he all that he seems, and does his wife's illness have a more sinister meaning ?

Characters are not always what they seem, with their own hidden agenda - so when events take a dark turn, who can be trusted.....

I hope you enjoy working out "whodunnit"

The licenced bar will be open
